I am curious, why would I need to change my browser's user agent from Chrome to something else? Is there some kind of security threat, or what? It seems that I am blocked by these messages (no images, etc.), although I am pretty sure that I am logged in and my IP is anonymous. This happens on my iPad, both WiFi and 4G. Here are the very same messages, which I receive on other websites as well (thanks a lot Google, with your "friendly" web servers, I can finally see why so many of you are under a DDOS attack.) Your IP address is logged. To get out of this trap, change your user agent. Note that this only happens when I am using this browser on my iPad (iOS 7). When I use it on my PC or Mac, the messages are not there. Why do I have to change my browser user agent? One more question for you guys about my iPad. I have a couple of different browsers on my iPad (like Mobile Safari, for example). When I surf the internet, I get this message, but it looks weird: Your IP address is logged. To
